MESSAGE FROM PATRONS

Mr. Kantilal Bam

Chairman
Icon Education Society

There are so many people who have great talent, but do not seem to use it. Many times, you'll be able to easily triumph over those who are gifted but unwilling to work hard enough to cope with your efforts. Hard work and good dose of determination can lead you anywhere, even if you are not the most talented in this area. Think about all those super talents in your preferred area of law. Only those talents who are willing to make an extra effort will be able to succeed. Otherwise, less talented people will outperform them with their boundless willingness to do extra-ordinary work.

Dr. Akshay Kanti Bam

Chairman
Indore Institute of Law

The purpose of organizing the 4th edition of International Conference is to familiarize the people regarding what problems various industries are facing with the main aphorism to make India aware of the recent development in contemporary world of law, management and social sciences. It is with this thought that we are pleased to announce 4th International Conference, that is going to be conducted from 17th -18th June, 2022.

Prof. (Dr.) Manpreet Kaur Rajpal

Director & Dean (Academic)
Indore Institute of Law

"For me it is an honour and a delight to invite your venerated institution to the flagship 4th International Conference on behalf of the Indore Institute of Law. I take great pleasure in welcoming all the participants to the 4th International Conference to present their paper and attendees who are wishing to attend the conference that is going to be conducted on 17th -18th June, 2022".

Dr. Vinod Patidar

Principal
Indore Institute of Law

In this 4th International Conference, we acknowledge the recent trends and issues emerging in the contemporary world. This 4th International Conference is setting off a constructive discourse in this arena. This Conference promotes greater knowledge by simulating participants to prepare and present their paper on the given theme and sub-themes.

ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

India has aspirations to eliminate poverty and become a $9 trillion economy by 2030 - the world's third largest. It could achieve that goal if it improves competitiveness, attracts more investment, creates sufficient jobs to absorb its growing population and pulls women into the job market, who are currently left out of paid work - thus realising its demographic dividend.

If India were to be a $9 trillion economy, its per capita income with a population of 1.5-1.6 billion by then would be under $6000. However, it would not yet be an advanced industrial economy and still be below Thailand and China of today. Nevertheless, it would be an impressive achievement and more importantly change people's lives within a generation.

What is becoming increasingly clear is that there is broad consensus among most political parties on what needs to be done on the economic front. Collaboration on some key reforms - Goods and Services Tax (GST), Insolvency and Bankruptcy Code (IBC), the continuation of Aadhaar, Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Act (MGNREGA) and Direct Benefit Transfer (DBT) shows that whichever government comes to power, the agenda for economic change remains more or less the same, perhaps with some differences in emphasis. Between now and 2030, under a normal election cycle of five years, we will see three changes of government at the Centre, but the broader agenda for India's long-term sustainable development will remain the same.

India to its goals of shared prosperity by 2030 - a $9 trillion economy, poverty eliminated and reduced disparities across the states and among its citizens. It must be an agenda in which government, private sector and civil society come together, in which the Centre and the States work as one, where a governance contract to focus on 'vikas' is the driving force of the country, especially in a turbulent global environment.

India has no option but to go forward on this agenda. Slower or jobless growth will create greater social discord and even conflict. It may even revive disparate tendencies in the union and leave us struggling at much lower levels of achievement than we are capable of. It is time to take our rightful place among the big economic global players, deliver a better life to our citizens that our Constitution promised nearly 70 years ago.

As a latecomer, India can learn from others' mistakes. Latin America and the Middle East focused on education and health but large social disparities, high corruption and weak business freedom led to huge unemployment which resulted in social conflict. In the Middle East, the Arab Spring showed that if you educate people and don't give them jobs, you create a time-bomb.

Taking the global circumstances into consideration and trends that shows sign of emerging India, the 4th International Conference on Emerging Trends in Law, Management and Social Sciences Envisioning Globe - 2030 focuses on such approach and highlights to recent developments.

“CONCEPT” NOTE

The conference intends to be a converging confluence for the prospective participants to engage in, interact with and discover myriad phenomena of innovations taking place around the world and expanding the frontiers of novelty and newness in various disciplines. As the innovation is the final outcome of the process of research hence through research paper presentations and insightful and enlightening addresses, the researchers and the luminary speakers are expected to cast light on the unexplored territories of innovations, demonstrate and showcase the existing best global practices and products surfacing their presence in different scenarios and having real-life applications in almost all walks of life if is made a sweeping generalization. It will further provide an opportunity to imbibe the shared-ideas as it is believed that the well-evaluated critically designed proposals have the transformative potential for future applications in making life easier and more comfortable for an individual.

The idea of the conference is for researcher, scholars and academicians for overall development all around the globe and the industry to present ongoing research activities. This conference will fulfil the requirement of industry and academics in contemporary scenario. This conference provides opportunities for the delegates to exchange new ideas and application experiences face to face, to establish business or research relations and to find global partners for future collaboration.

THEMES OF THE CONFERENCE

LAW

LEGAL ASPECTS OF CRYPTO CURRENCY LAW

The power to regulate currency in a modern sovereign State is either with the Government or the Central Bank. A private decentralised crypto currency is neither issued by the State nor regulated by the State. Therefore, more than 8500 crypto currencies globally with a market Capitalisation of more than USD One Trillion do not have legal tender. In India, the crypto currency is not banned. The restriction imposed by the Reserve Bank of India through its circular dated 6th April 2018 was declared to be void on the ground of proportionality by the judgement of the Supreme Court of India. At the same time, there is a draft bill, which is yet to be introduced in the Parliament of India to ban private crypto currencies in India. Thus, there is uncertainty w.r.t. the legal status of crypto currency in India.

SUB-THEMES

- Crypto currency Regulation in India and Other Countries
- Bitcoin and its Development
- Crypto currency Bill in India
- Crypto currency as Money or Security
- Crypto currency and Cybercrime

LEGAL ASPECTS OF ARTIFICIAL INTELLIGENCE

Ethics and Law are inextricably connected in this modern contemporary era, and thereby many legal decisions arise from the interpretation of various ethical issues surrounding them. Artificial Intelligence adds a different and a new dimension to these questions. Systems that use artificial intelligence technologies today are becoming increasingly autonomous in terms of the complexity of the tasks they can perform, their potential impact on the world and the diminishing ability of humans to understand, predict and control their functioning. The legal problems run even deeper. A system that has the ability to adapt from the information it receives from the outside world can act in ways that its creators could not have predicted, and predictability is crucial to modern legal approaches. What is more, in future, such systems could operate independently from their creators thus complicating the task of determining responsibility. These characteristics pose problems related to predictability and the ability to act independently while at the same time not being held responsible.

The law seems to be playing catch up to the technological innovations across the globe in this area. Artificial intelligence thus raises various ethical, social and legal challenges.

SUB-THEMES

- Legal Dimensions of AI and Nanotechnology
- Artificial Intelligence and Law: International Relations and Public Diplomacy
- Scope of splinternet & 5G governance in multilateral governance & data sovereignty policy
- AI and Its Interplay with Data Privacy, Data Protection & Allied Existing Regimes
- Artificial Intelligence in the Health care sector: Legalities Involved

MANAGEMENT

ENVISIONING BUSINESS: 2030

While marching towards 75 years of independence, India is poised to transform as one of the sixth leading economies of the world. As India rides steadily on the ladder to become a global power, tremendous possibilities are unleashed for the people of our country and the world. As India stands to recover from pandemic and gain desired momentum, perhaps, it is the right time to put our acts together and envision about the future course which will take India to the league of prosperous nations. Indian economy has progressed ever since the ushering of economic reforms in 1991. The implementation of GST and other such initiatives have further transformed the economic landscape of the country. By 2030, India is projected to witness a steep growth in consumer spending, creating massive demand in domestic as well as in international markets. India is fondly deemed as one of the fastest-growing economies in the world. This Conference emphasis Sessions where Business Leaders, Industrialists, and Change Makers shall dwell on the following themes:

SUB THEMES

- Road map of Indian economy in 2030
- India's future as envisioned by youth
- Management education as a critical influencer
- Technology and innovation for rising India

ROLE OF E- COMMERCE IN INDIAN BANKING SECTOR

E-commerce will create new forms of competition and compel banks to make choices about the services they offer, the size of their branch networks, and the extent of their support for interbank payment networks. Participation in e-commerce will also increase banks' exposure to technological problems. Banks' success in coping with such challenges will help determine the scale of their influence in the electronic marketplace. A bank might set up a web site to provide consumers with information about its services. Actual banking transactions, however, still took place at the branch, through the mail, by telephone, or over the automated teller machine (ATM) network.

The transactional web sites offer banks and their customers notable advantages. Customers are attracted by the convenience of this access channel, while banks welcome the cost savings that arise when customers perform the transactions themselves rather than dealing with a bank representative at a teller window or over the phone.

SUB – THEMES

- Banking industry response on e – commerce
- Bank Venture into the Electronic Arena
- New Opportunities and Strategic Risks of e – commerce industry

SOCIAL SCIENCE

DYNAMICS OF GEOPOLITICS IN RUSSIA AND UKRAINE

The conflict between Russia and Ukraine can be looked at through the prisms of geo-culture, geopolitics and geo-economics. If this continues, it may have a deeper impact on the security of both Europe and Asia through its spill over effect. India because of its stature as a global power can play a major role in addressing the complex geopolitics emerging out of the Slavic Eco cultural space.

Focusing on discourses by the ruling elite, this article examines the construction of 'geopolitical spaces' in Russian foreign policy. Based on a critical geopolitical analysis, suggesting that territory, space and geographies are being actively (re)formulated by those in power, this article analyses how policy-makers define and articulate the importance of a particular geographical region for their foreign policy. It analyse how the three 'geopolitical spaces' – Eurasia, the Euro-Atlantic and the Asia-Pacific – are defined by Russia's political leaders and how each space fulfils a particular function for the pursuit of Russian interests abroad.

SUB-THEMES

- US and European Interests
- Russia's pivot Toward China
- EU- Russian Relations
- The NATO Scenario

POLITICS OF MANDAL, KAMANDAL AND HIJAB

POLITICS OF MANDAL, KAMANDAL AND HIJAB

The growing insignificance of Muslim electoral politics is seen as an obvious outcome of the ultimate triumph of the Kamandal politics of Hindutva, especially after the success of the Bharatiya Janata Party in Uttar Pradesh. There is consensus that Mandal politics is completely redundant and, for that reason, the political space for the Muslim electorate is shrinking.

This simple and uncomplicated reading of a contemporary moment of politics is not entirely incorrect. It is true that the discourse of inclusion and social justice has been replaced by an aggressive, Hindutva-driven nationalism in the realm of electoral politics. It is also true that the non-BJP forces do not want to be seen as pro-Muslim parties in order to avoid the tag of appeasement. Yet, the capitulation of Mandal at the hands of Kamandal should not be exaggerated to explain Muslim electoral anxieties.

SUB-THEMES

- Mandal politics
- Kamandal politics of Hindutva
- Hijab Controversies
